Peppermill Case

] with DOELLNER

8 February 1965

asked whether CATIDE could borrow the peppermill again in March and I said I was sure this would be ok. He then allowed me to listen to a portion of the tape they made of the meeting. A young man I have never met before had been listening to the tape and taking notes on what was said. The noise level was so high it was practically impossible to understand what was being said. I could tell only that the conversation was in German. DOELLNER pointed to the notes the young man was taking and indicated that a portion of the conversation was in Czech (PETERSEN had implied at least that it was entirely in German.) DOELLNER said he would provide us with a copy of the tape.
